A review of a series of 106 shoulder arthroplasties. Between March 1988 and June 1992, 106 shoulder arthroplasties were performed using two reverse total shoulder protheses. There were 106 left shoulders and 55 right shoulders in the series. The average patient age was 65 years at the time of surgery. The average follow-up was 36 months. In 65 patients the right shoulder had been replaced, and in 41 the left shoulder. The average outcome score was 76 points (maximum, 100 points). In 67% the score was above 80 points, 47% of the shoulder arthroplasties were rated as good or excellent, and one-third of the shoulders had radiographic evidence of loosening at last follow-up. There were six postoperative infections, and all patients had progressive polyethylene wear. While technically demanding, shoulder arthroplasty can be performed with good functional results when done by a surgeon experienced in such procedures.Q: SQLite not saving an integer correctly in Python import sqlite3 def main(): connection = sqlite3.connect("./StockRegister.db") try: connection.row_factory = sqlite3.Row connection.execute('SELECT * FROM bovines') print(connection.execute("SELECT " + str(bovines).rsplit(",")[0])[0]._cols) print(connection.execute("SELECT SUM(Stock
